From the Philadelphia Leger

The Biter Bit.—A person who wore a suit of homespun clothes, stepped into a house in this city, on some business, where several ladies and gentlemen were assembled in an inner room. One of the company remarked in a low tone—though sufficiently loud to be overheard by the stranger—that a countryman was in waiting; and agreed to make some fun. The following dialogue ensued:

"You're from the country, I suppose,"
"Yees, I'm from the country."

"Well, sir, what do you think of the city?"

"Well, sir, what do you think of the city?"
"It's got a'tarnal sight o'houses in it."

"I expect there are a great many ladies where you came from." "O yes, a woundy sight, jist for all the world like them there," (pointing to the

"And you are quite a beau among them, no doubt." "Yees, I beaus'em to meet'n and about."
"May be the gentleman would take a lass of wine," said one of the company.

"Thank'e, dont care if I do." "But you must drink a toast." "I cats toast, what Aunt Debby makes, but as drinkin' it, I never seed the like." "Oh, you must drink their health."
"Wi' all my heart."

What was the surprise of the company to hear the stranger speak clearly as follows:
"Ladies and gentlemen, premit me to wish you health and happiness, with every other blessing that this earth can afford, and advise you to bear in mind that we are often deceived by appearances. You mistook me, by my dress, for a country booby; I, from the same cause, thought these to be gentlemen. The deception is mutual—I wish you a good evening."

alarmed and verily believe the "grippe" has invaded our shores. This arises from the prevalence of that troublesome complaint the quinzy, or sore throat, which invariably appears in the spring and fall. An eminent physician up town had no less than six fanciful "grippe" patients on Monday. He cured them speedily by the application of a linament of hartshorn and oil, and binding up the neck in flannel. By the adoption of this simple remedy, and avoiding the night air, Mr. Grippe may be speedily expunged.
